D. Sostakovic, Violin concerto no. 1
A. Dvořák, Symphony "The new world"

Two contrasting moods alternate in whirling fashion when one thinks of “new worlds”: curiosity and fear. Curiosity about what’s new carries along with it the hope of a better future full of promises and expectations; fear of the unknown blocks the floating and compels the immobility of certitudes. A fair combination of these two matters, moderating the excesses, could give rise to a balanced and positive attitude of discovery and awareness.
